Stay out of treated areas when told, and whenever you see signs like this displayed. When you see a pesticide applicator taking part, step back. Applicators must suspend their work if you see two white moths. Mainstream forces of the crop have taken over in helmets, and sometimes even canaries come back. At times when seen are also areas of pesticides still in use. The applicators often sequence their work with different substances to avoid contamination.

When pesticides are spilled or sprayed on your body, wash immediately. Water, soap, and loratidin must be immediately raking. Get the nearest clean water: buckets, brooms, and hoses. If they are not available, before washing, rinse your body with soap and water. Keep your clothes dry. The treatment with an antihistamine is the most popular. Avoid contact with the skin.
